

Post Magazine / Short Reads

Laksa, prawn toast, curry puffs and more in book of recipes that's a love letter from Dominica Yang to her mother who cooked them when she was growing up in Hong Kong

- Dominica Yang's latest cookbook, Mum's Kitchen – Back to Basics, based on her mother's handwritten recipes, features a mix of Asian and international dishes
- Fun illustrations by Hong Kong cartoon artist Tweety Bao from the book are on display at the Hong Kong Arts Centre, in Wan Chai

Kylie Knott + FOLLOW
Published: 5:15pm, 16 Dec, 2021

Why you can trust SCMP

2

f t i a s p p p p

Post

🗨️ 💬

Dominica Yang with her new cookbook Mum's Kitchen – Back to Basics, at Hong Kong Arts Centre, in Wan Chai. Photo: May Tse

Every page of Dominica Yang's latest cookbook, Mum's Kitchen – Back to Basics, triggers happy food memories.

"I grew up with food," says Hong Kong-born Yang. "My family did a lot of bonding through the cooking, eating and sharing of food [...] conversations were always about food."

The cookbook, Yang's fourth, showcases 30 Western, Chinese and Southeast Asian dishes and is a tribute to her "kind mother", Lucia, who nurtured her love of cooking.

"When I was cleaning out our family home of 62 years I found a lot of mum's handwritten recipes," she says, adding that she was encouraged by family and friends to share them in a book.

Dominica Yang and her mother Lucia, the inspiration for her latest cookbook. Photo: Courtesy Dominica Yang

Some recipes – Kin's Laksa ("it's all about the prawn stock and lai fun noodles") and Sambal Udang (prawns in chilli paste) – have a strong Malaysian influence, reflecting the time Yang's mother spent in Kuala Lumpur as a teenager. Others, such as the "fil devil prawn toast" and mini curry puffs, are a nod to her "amazing host" mother.

And while the book features a mix of cuisines, all the recipes are personal.

New Hong Kong restaurant Dynasty Cove – top Fujian and Cantonese dishes

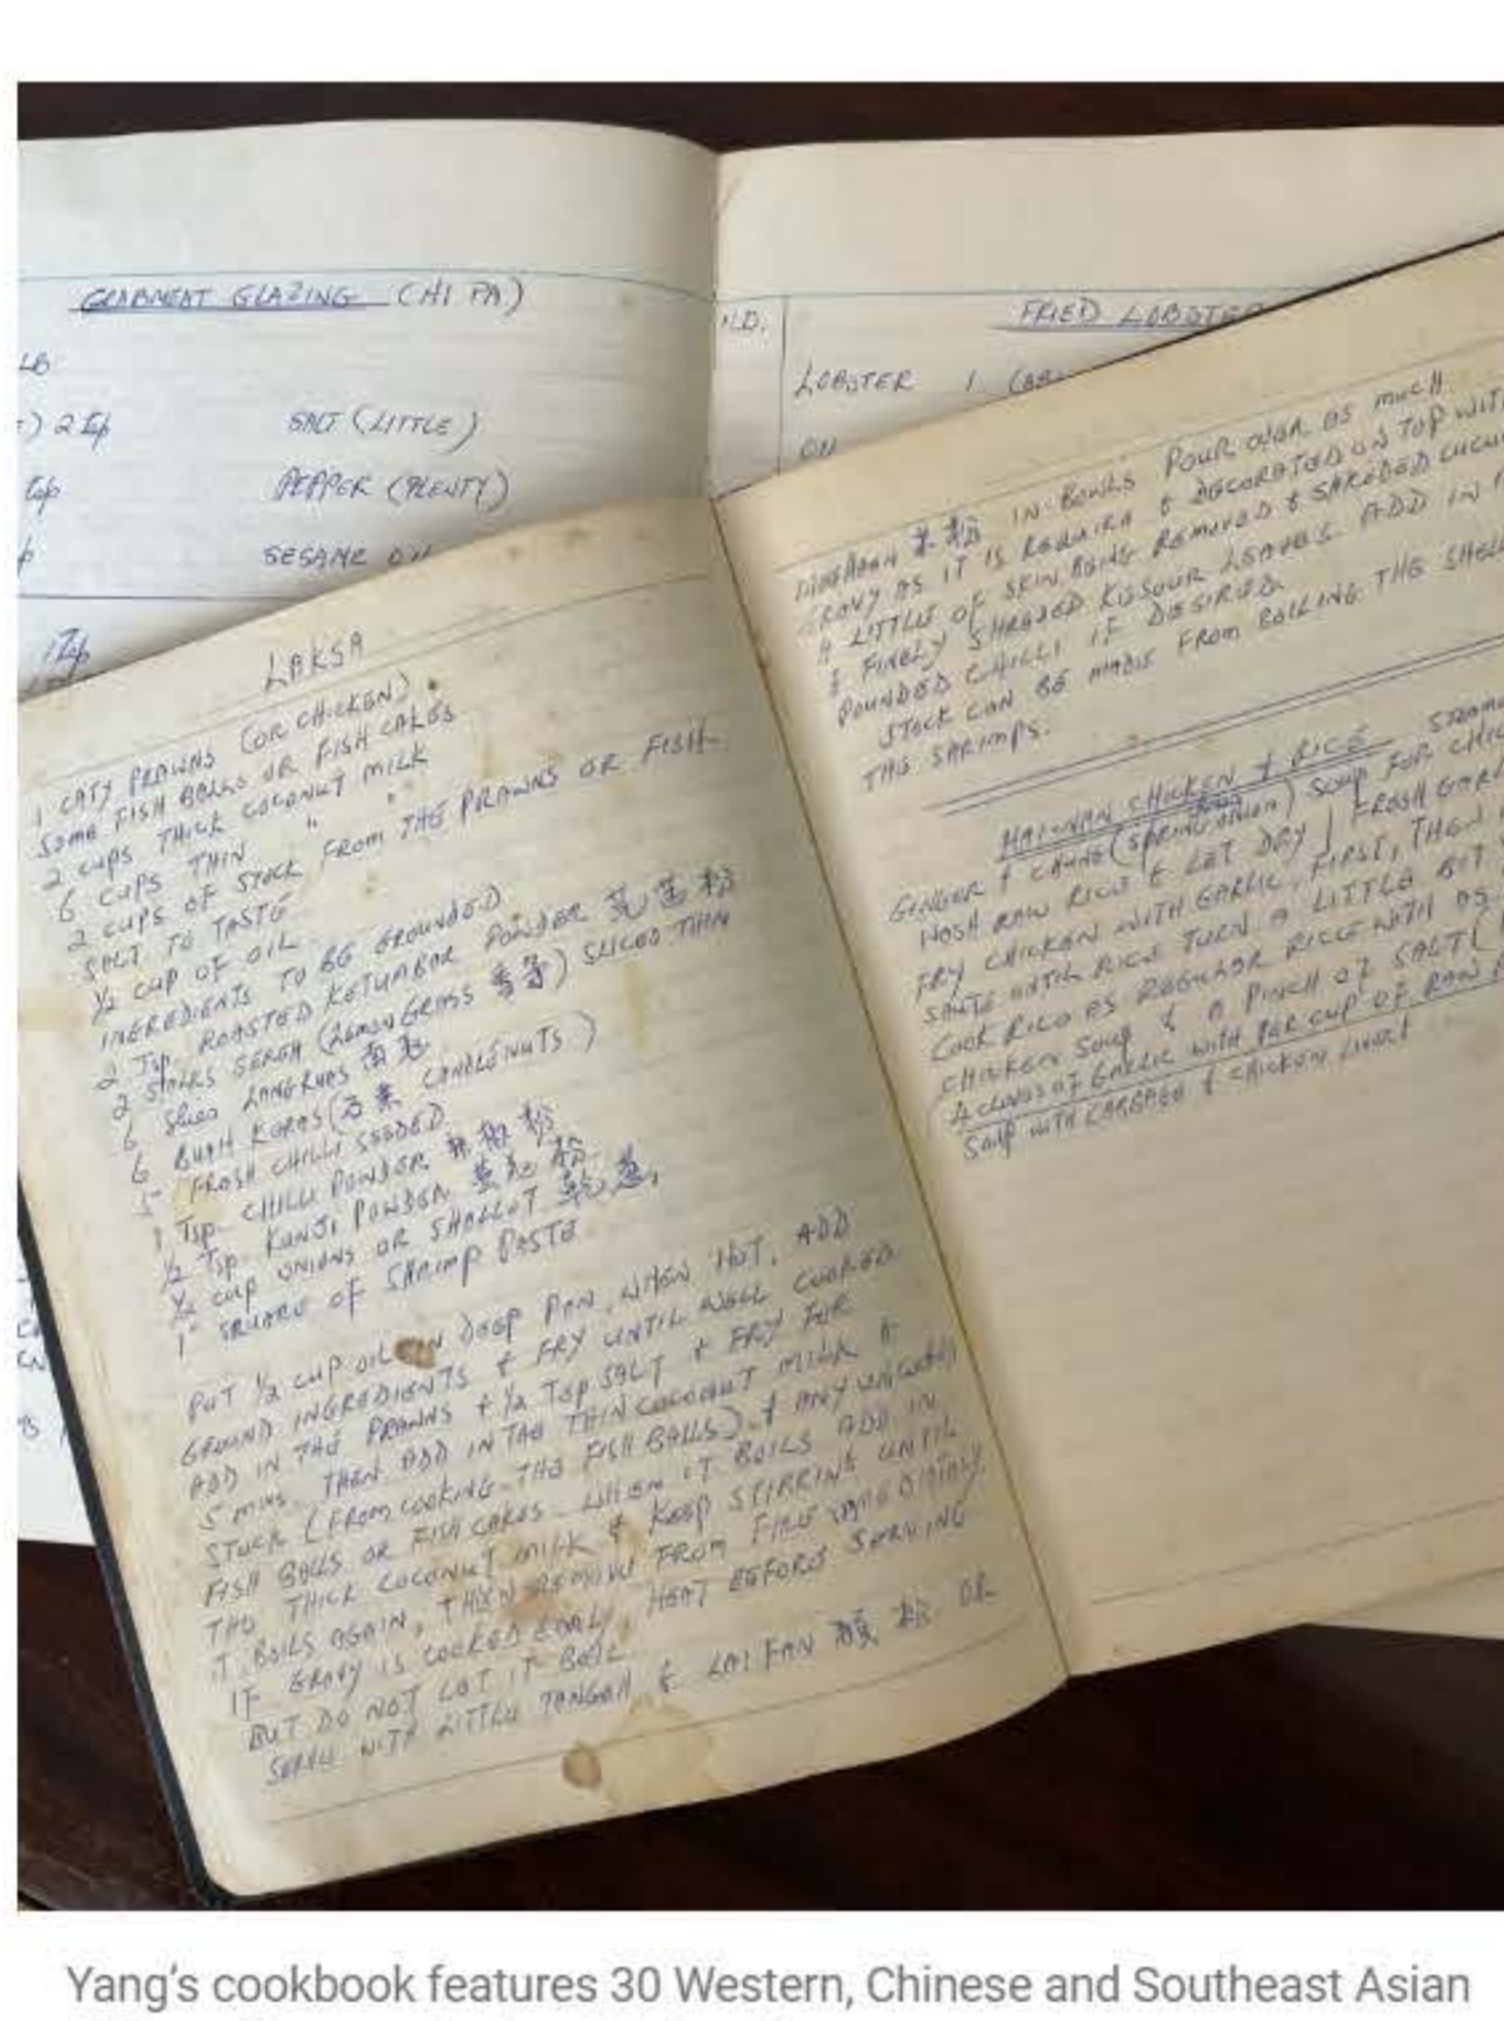

15 Dec 2021

"This dish, Uncle Max's Taramasalata 'cod roe dip', I helped make with mum when I was young because it didn't require any cooking," she says, adding that the recipe's name came from a family friend who was a Greek Cypriot.

"I had the task of breaking up the bread and pouring in the olive oil and vinegar."

Sweet teeth are also catered for with traditional Asian desserts such as sago Melaka and Western classics like scones – a recipe she honed hosting afternoon tea with friends – and apple crumble tart.

Yang's cookbook features 30 Western, Chinese and Southeast Asian dishes of her mother's original recipes.

A laksa dish from Mum's Kitchen – Back to Basics.

All proceeds from the publication will go to Priscilla's Home, at the Fu Hong Society, a Hong Kong NGO that focuses on developing the potential of people with disabilities. The charity is close to Yang's heart.

"My sister Priscilla, who passed away in 1964, aged just 10, was born mentally and physically disabled," Yang says. "In 1983, in memory of my sister, my father helped set up Priscilla's Home to provide day training and residential services for those with disabilities."

What makes Yang's cookbook stand out from the crowd are fun illustrations by Hong Kong cartoon artist Tweety Bao. "A crossover between art and gastronomy seemed like a good idea," she says. "Cooking is art."

twetybao.art Hong Kong Arts Centre View profile

View more on Instagram

115 likes

twetybao.art

【原稿展覽】本包早前與食譜作家楊余夏閣合作，在她出版的慈善食譜《親廚 - 回味家常》以漫畫講述她與媽媽的美味故事🥰而漫畫的原稿將會在藝術中心展出👉

今次展覽除了本包漫畫原稿，仲有【扶康會】的服務使用者，為另一本書《企鵝皮拉與希望的天空 溫文詩詩集》創作的插畫和藝術作品。

👉《親廚》由香港藝術中心出版，於香港藝術中心商店及網上商店現正發售：
<https://hkacartshop.store/>

📍地點：香港藝術中心三樓蔡靜賢實驗畫廊（香港灣仔道50號）

📅日期：2021.12.03 - 2021.12.30

🕒時間：10:00 - 18:00 *若舞臺劇院進行日場演出，開放時間將會稍作更改。

🎫費用：免費入場

◆主辦 Presenter：香港藝術中心 Hong Kong Arts Centre

◆合辦 Collaborator：扶康會 Fu Society

◆香港插畫 #插畫 #漫畫 #展覽 #水彩 #藝術 #art #illustration #hkg #HongKongArtsCentre #HKAC #香港藝術中心 #ArtsforAll #illustrationbook #booklaunch #exhibition #ArtForAllillustrationBooks

view all comments

Add a comment...

On the third floor of the Hong Kong Arts Centre, in Wan Chai, where the original illustrations featured in the cookbook are on display, Yang explains some of the stories behind the colourful drawings.

In one, Yang – with London's iconic Big Ben clock tower in the background – is on the phone to her mum. "I spent my secondary education in England so I would often call her and ask mum for cooking tips and recipes. Dad would always complain about how much the long-distance phone calls would cost," she laughs.

Other illustrations capture a childhood centred on food, family and friends.

Mum's Kitchen – Back to Basics by Dominica Yang.

"My parents were very hospitable – there were always lots of gatherings," she says. "This illustration here is a funny story. It shows me and my younger brother secretly took a few sips of Pimm's [...] He got a little drunk."

Mum's Kitchen – Back to Basics is now available at Hong Kong bookshops.

Conversations Comments will close in 7 days

Join the conversation...

POST COMMENT

Kylie Knott + FOLLOW

After 1 years with the Post, Kylie Knott found her calling on the culture and lifestyle desk. She writes about the environment, animal welfare, food and the arts.

✉️