Singapore artist's solo Hong Kong show is a feast of Classically trained, Jane Lee spent years producing photorealistic paintings before asking herself: why repeat other people's work? Now her works are a riot of colours,

You can't help but see red at Jane Lee's first solo exhibition in Hong Kong.

The floor outside the Pao Galleries at the Hong Kong Arts Centre in Wan Chai is covered in ribbons of red, stripped canvases, and nearly everything inside is red. It is a colour redolent of so many things that one may assume the Singaporean artist has chosen it for a reason, perhaps not least her show's politically resonant title, "Red
